

Skipper the chipmunk was waiting for his present. Suddenly, he saw the coolest swing set on planet earth! It looked like a tropical island, with a twirly slide that landed in a pool! Skipper climbed the ladder, monkey bars, and poles looking like real palm trees, with gorgeous flowers. Then, he went on swings made of Mike and Ike tropical flavor jellybeans and fluffy marshmallows, on fun lollipop seesaws, and toured the swing set.

After drinking water, with a “shehakol,” he noticed blue, yellow, and red buttons. He could only read the yellow button, which said: “tropical island.” He decided to press the blue button. Suddenly, instead, there was an arctic swing set, with an ice skating rink! Instead of monkey bars, there were pieces of snowflakes, and icicle poles! Instead of jellybean swings, they were chocolate covered strawberries! Instead of lollipop seesaws, there were vanilla ice cream tubs to sit on!

Then, as much as he loved it, he pressed the red button. Everything became red candy. The ice skating rink slide became a really cool, red ball pit!, so when sliding, you would fall into it!!!! The monkey bars became delicious, red licorice twists! The swings turned into fantastic mini red apple bits, smushed with marshmallow fluff! The seesaw was made of hot tamales, with marshmallow fluff.

After that, Skipper pressed the “tropical island” yellow button, to go back to his good time there. However, while playing, he thought, “ I still don’t know about the other buttons!” Finally, he realized, after he stopped playing. The red one was for “red ragious.” Blue had to be for “blue arctic.” Now it was very clear. Skipper pressed “blue arctic” and had a bluetastic time!
